Food for Thought

Mindfulness is usually associated with meditation or yoga, but what about the dinner table? Mindful eating is an approach that helps us become more aware of what we eat, why we eat, and how we feel when we eat. Practicing a few mindful eating habits every day can help us make healthier food choices and keep portion sizes in check.

Take It All In
Notice the color, texture, aroma, temperature, and taste of your food in order to fully appreciate your meal using all 5 senses.

Take A Tech Time-Out
Putting away your phone or laptop can help you focus on your body’s hunger cues and enjoy the present moment.

Take Less
Our eyes are often are bigger than our stomachs. Start with a smaller portion of food to avoid overeating and consuming excess calories.

Take Your Time
Eating slower allows you to savor and enjoy your meal while noticing all the flavors of the food. You may also notice when you start to become full.

Take A Listen To Your Body
Eat when you are hungry and stop when you start to feel full. Following your body’s natural hunger and fullness cues is a simple, yet important mindful eating skill to help fuel your body with the right amount of nourishment at each meal.

Take A Seat
Eating with others helps develop healthy relationships and makes your meal more enjoyable. So gather (virtually) around the table and enjoy a meal together.

Remember to Munch Mindfully

Author: Kiera Nealon
Reviewed by: Marina Vine, RDN, RYT – Rutgers Dining Services

Questions? Like us on Facebook (RU Healthy Dining Team), follow us on Twitter (@ru_hdt), Instagram (@ru_hdt), Snapchat (ru_hdt) or email peggyp@dining.rutgers.edu